Rheumatism
Neuralgia, Sprains,
Pain in the Back and Side.
There is nothing more painful than these diseases; but the pain can be removed and the disease cured by use of Perry Davis' Pain Killer.
This remedy is not a cheap Benzine or Petroleum product that must be kept away from fire or heat to avoid danger of explosion, nor is it an untried experiment that may do more harm than good.
Pain Killer has been in constant use for forty years, and the universal testimony from all parts of the world is, It never fails. It not only effects a permanent cure, but it relieves pain almost instantaneously. Being a purely vegetable remedy, it is safe in the hands of the most inexperienced.
The record of cures by the use of PAIN KILLER would fill volumes. The following extracts from letters received show what those who have tried it think:
Edgar Cady, Owatonna, Minn., says:
About a year since my wife became subject to severe suffering from rheumatism. Our resort was to the PAIN KILLER, which speedily relieved her.
Charles Powell writes from the Sailors' Home, London:
I had been afflicted three years with neuralgia and violent vomings of the stomach. The doctors at Westminster Hospital gave up my case in despair. I tried your PAIN KILLER, and it gave me immediate relief. I have resumed my strength, and am now able to follow my usual occupation.
G. H. Walworth, Saco, Me., writes:
I experienced immediate relief from pain in the side by the use of your PAIN KILLER.
E. York says:
I have used your PAIN KILLER for rheumatism, and have received great benefit.
Barton Seaman says:
Have used PAIN KILLER for thirty years, and have found it a never-failing remedy for rheumatism and lameness.
Mr. Burditt writes:
It never fails to give relief in cases of rheumatism.
Phil. Gilbert, Somerset, Pa., writes:
From actual use, I know your PAIN KILLER is the best medicine I can get.
All druggists keep PAIN KILLER. Its price is so low that it is within the reach of all, and it will save many times its cost in doctors' bills. 25c., 50c. and $1.00 a bottle.

Poetical.

GOOD NIGHT.

Good night—the little lips touch ours,
The little arms enfold us;
And oh, that thus through coming years
They might forever hold us!

Good night! we answer back and smile,
And kiss the drooping eyes;
But in our trembling hearts the while
The wistful queries rise,

Who, in the weary years to come,
When we are hid from sight,
Will clasp these little hands and kiss
These little lips "Good night?"

COQUETTE.

"Coquette," my love they sometimes call.
For she is light of lips and heart;
What though she smile alike on all,
If in her smiles she knows no art?

Like some glad brook she seems to be,
That ripples o'er its pebbly bed,
And prattles to each flower or tree,
Which stoops to kiss it, overhead.

Beneath the heavens' white and blue
It purls and sings and laughs and leaps,
The sunny meadows dancing through
O'er noisy shoals and frothy steeps.

'Tis thus the world doth see the brook;
But I have seen it otherwise,
When following it to some far nook
Where leafy shiel is shut out the skies.

And there its waters rest, subdued,
In shadowy pools, serene and shy,
Wherein grave thoughts and fancies brood
And tender dreams and longings lie.

I love it when it laughs and leaps,
But love it better when at rest—
'Tis only in its tranquil deeps
I see my image in its breast!

Select Story.

WHY I HAD TWO WEDDING DAYS.

Everything had been duly and properly arranged for our wedding. The engagement of Miss Nell Bartley to Mr. Bertram Langley had been duly announced in the fashion column of a leading "society journal," and the wedding day had arrived.

I am Bertram Langley—commonly called Bert—and while I confess to be most sincerely an I entirely in love with my little Nell, I must add I had been quite annoyed about our marriage, first at the persistence with which she insisted upon a grand wedding.

I hate fuss and parade, and have an old time notion that a marriage rehearsal giddily and eventually solemnized before a crowd of gossiping, gaping people, is robbed of all its sweet purity. Then, too, the trousseau! The whole business is a nuisance! Excuse the big word, but my feelings are strong on that point. What on earth a woman wants of clothes enough to last five years, and gew-gaws more than she can ever hope to use, I never could see; unless, indeed, she entertains a horrible suspicion that the new firm may refuse to furnish a fresh supply.

It's all right, I suppose, since they all do it (no slang intended), but it was a trying time for me, I can tell you. I could scarcely get a glimpse of Nell, she was so busy with dress-makers, milliners, etc., etc.; and when I did see her, she was in such a rattling hurry to be off to keep an appointment with some workman or other, that I actually grew a little savage.

For a month before we were to be married I believe I never entered the house once but Kate—Nell's married sister—rushed into the room with an—

"Excuse me, Bert, but Nell is wanted a moment." Or, "Don't look cross, Bert, but Nellie must see Madame This or That," till I lost patience.

There was another cause of annoyance, too—Nell's father was a rich man, and as able as he was willing to furnish his daughter with as much finery as she might desire, while I, on the contrary, was a man with his way to still make in the world.

True, I had a fair income and fair prospects, but I could not hope to give Nell as luxurious a home or as elaborate a wardrobe as her papa provided—at least not for some years; but I could afford to support a wife, and I loved Nell with all my heart.

When I asked Mr. Bartley's consent to our marriage, he was at first just a little inclined to find fault with my financial condition. An older man, with a well secured fortune would have suited him better. He had a most unwholesome dread of fortune hunters, and even went so far as to have a mild suspicion that I might be just a bit interested in that way; but all that wore off in time, and we were on the best of terms.

I only mention this to show how a suspicion once entertained will return on the faintest invitation, and not unfrequently on none at all; for the time came when Mr. Bartley not only entertained this unjust surmise, but eagerly hugged this foul thought to his heart, and grew murderous in that vital organ toward me—Bertram Langley—as innocent a man as ever stepped.

The day before the one fixed upon for our marriage, Nell and I had our first tiff. I called to inform her of the smallest possible hitch in the church machinery. The regular sexton was obliged to leave town, but had secured the services of his brother (a very deaf and stupid man, as it turned out). Possibly she might have some instructions to give him.

I waited full half an hour in the reception room, cooling my heels and warming my wrath, before Nell rushed in.

"What is it, Bert?" she asked, breathlessly. "I am awful busy!"

A spark is enough to ignite a whole city if it only falls upon highly inflammable material, and a word is quite enough to raise a furious temper in a man who is aching to get mad; so I answered, curtly—

"If you are in such a hurry, it is no matter what I wished to say."

Nell opened her brown eyes in surprise.

"I've got to select some lace," she exclaimed, "and Kate can't wait."

"Neither can I!" I retorted, shortly, pulling on my gloves. Then, after a moment, I added: "You think a great deal of furbelows, don't you?"

"Indeed I do!"

"I am afraid you will have to do with vastly less when you are married."

Nell tossed her head saucily.

"All the more reason I should be allowed to enjoy these papa give me."

That shot went home. I bit my lips, but managed to keep cool outside, though inwardly I was boiling.

"It is not too late to retreat," I said, coolly. "If you repent your bargain, there is time to escape."

Nell's eyes grew big with horror at the idea.

"Indeed, it is entirely too late!" she cried out. "Why, everybody knows it! All our set have cards—I should die of mortification to put it off now! We must go on, any way; I have no fancy for being a laughing stock for every one."

"Better be laughted at a week than miserable for a lifetime," I retorted.

Nell opened her lips to answer, but just at that moment Kate put her head in the door.

"Nell! Nell! Excuse me Bert—

I stayed to hear no more, but turned on my heel and strode away.

No sooner had I reached my hotel when I was heartily ashamed of myself, and when Tom, my elder brother and only living relative, rushed in and told me that he had left his wife ill at home, so anxious was he to see me married, the last bit of crossness departed, and a great wave of tenderness swept over my heart for the brown eyed girl whom I knew was to marry me to-morrow only because she loved me far better than the elegance of her father's home or the costly trifles he could give her.

Tom was ill at ease and worried, and I know nothing but my marriage or funeral could have induced him to leave home when Lettie was ill.

Next morning I saw Nellie for a moment only, but the kiss I pressed on her dear little mouth was a silent plea for pardon and a promise for better control over my temper next time.

Evening came—the church was packed—and I, feeling most uncommonly stiff and awkward in a span new suit and speckless gloves, was awaiting in the vestry.

Nellie was to enter on her father's arm, followed by her bridesmaids and groomsmen—six in number—while I was to enter in the nick of time from the vestry, the minister from his study, and meet before the altar.

It was all very pretty, but I almost knew I should make a mess of it—and I did, with a vengeance.

I had requested to be allowed to be alone, so as to keep my part in mind, and for the reason went early to the church, not to be stared at and confused, for this show affair was not one bit to my mind.

Just at the last moment Tom came rushing in, followed by the regular sexton.

"I've got a telegram from Lettie," said Tom, his voice quivering. "She is worse, and I must start at once. Just time to catch the train. Good by, old boy! God bless you!"

"I'm going too—just came to wish you joy, Mr. Bert," said the sexton, who had known me since I was a lad. "Sorry I can't see you married. My road's the same as your brother's, so I'll go with him;" and off they both hurried, the door shutting with a sharp click behind them.

The time for the arrival of the wedding party drew near; I advanced to the door that opened into the church, designing to open it and peep through. It resisted my efforts. I struggled with it sharply—no use! the door was locked.

Muttering a curse on the stupidity of the sexton, I strode to the outer door. In shutting the door it too had become locked, and was as fast as fate.

Great drops of perspiration stood out on my forehead. What was to be done? I asked myself the question, and mopped my face with my immaculate handkerchief, but failed to find the answer.

Then I flew back to the inner door and listened. The organ was playing gayly, and a subdued hush told me that Nellie was entering on her father's arm, and here I was standing, caged like a rat.

Oh, how I tried to open that door! My gloves split, and the perspiration ran in rivers down my face and dropped off the end of my nose; but not one inch could I budge it.

I have wondered since how should I have looked if I had succeeded in bursting open the door, and been suddenly projected before the creme de la creme, with limp collar, torn gloves and distended eyes. I can smile now, but I can assure you I saw no fun in it then.

I tried the door till positively no hope remained in that direction. Then I flew again to the outer door and pounded and even shouted, but to no purpose.

Utterly hopeless, I returned to the inner door once more. All was silent. Should I thunder upon its panels and proclaim my presence and demand to be "let out?" Nobody likes to look like a fool if he can help it—and I hesitated.

I glanced around. The windows caught my eye—why had I not thought of them? I could at least make my escape, and the ceremony might be delayed, and consequently awkward; still Nellie would not be utterly put to shame. Like the madman I was, I seized the table, dragged it to the window, sprang upon it, and climbed on to the high and narrow window sill; throwing up the sash, I prepared to leap out; but I had reckoned without my host; the cord that held the weight was broken, consequently the moment my hand left the sash the window descended with startling rapidity, striking me full upon the head, and knocking me off the narrow sill, dashing my head against the sharp corner of the table, and at last landing me full length on the floor.

I tried to rise; something warm rushed over my face; I put up my hand to clear my eyes—my hand was covered with blood.

I felt giddy and weak, still I staggered to my feet; then a black mist arose around me, and I knew no more.

This was Thursday eve. Sunday afternoon the sexton, returning to his duties, found me lying upon the floor, half dead, wholly delirious, my face covered with blood, and a hole in my head large enough to let the life out of any man. That mine was spared was because I had fallen with the wound down, and the soft pile of the carpet acted like lint to staunch the blood.

As soon as I could control my thoughts I begged to know of Nellie. Poor little girl! she had been quite overwhelmed. When I failed to appear Kate's husband rushed out to inquire of the sexton if he had seen me. He was positive that I had been there, and equally positive that I had left again in company with his brother—said he could not be mistaken—both seemed in a great hurry and had jumped into a carriage and been driven rapidly away.

Messengers were sent to my hotel, but without gaining a clue to my whereabouts; so after a mortifying wait Nellie had been taken home, and the very morning of the day I was discovered the whole family sailed for Europe.

As soon as I was able to stand I sailed in search of the woman I had so innocently humiliated. Not knowing her whereabouts it was two months before I found her. At last, one evening, wandering on the seashore of a quiet little English town, I espied her—and alone.

That she believed me a most blackened villain was plain, for the look she gave me when she recognized my presence was one of unutterable contempt. Now that I had found her I was determined she should hear the truth.

"Nellie," I cried, hurrying to her and grasping both her little hands before she had time to escape.

"Well, sir," she replied haughtily, trying, but trying in vain to free her hands.

"My darling," I pleaded, "you will at least hear a man before you condemn him!"

Her face flushed angrily.

"What can you say," she burst out hotly, "that will make your conduct less dastardly? Have you not made me the object of every one's ridicule and contemptuous pity! Offering me public insult no woman could ever forgive! Have you not made me hate everybody, myself most of all? What more do you wish, Bertram Langley—you villain!"

I winced a little at the word as I thought of my broken head—though God knows I did not blame her, believing as she did.

"Why are you here? And why did you run away?" she demanded, with a whole world of scorn on the words "run away."

"I did not run away; I was locked up."

"Locked up! For what? Where?" cried poor Nell, starting back, a look of horror creeping up into the brown eyes.

I verily believe she thought for an instant I had added murder to other crimes.

"Why, in the vestry," I explained, a little foolishly. "Come and sit down and let me tell you. I am quite ill yet."

This was a master stroke. Nell seated herself without demur, and I, half sitting, half lying at her feet, related to her the chapter of my misfortunes.

Dear little girl! her face brightened before I was through—indeed. I am sorry to say she laughed quite heartily; but she became sober when I told her about the window coming down and leaned over and kissed the scar on my head tenderly, and I knew that peace and confidence was restored.

After a while we fell to talking it over in a general way.

"It was a dreadful blow to me," said Nell positively; "I thought my heart was broken."

"I thought it was a pretty tough blow myself," I laughed. "By jove, I thought my head was broken! When that window came down it knocked me higher than Gilderoy's kite! The next time we are married Nell, I won't be left to dig out of any such a ridiculous hole as a vestry; if there are windows that have got to be jumped out of,. we'll hop out together."

Great was the family wonder to see us walk in together; but everything was all right as soon as explained, and Mr. and Mrs. Bartley consented that Nell and I might be married next day in the quaint little church in that place.

And so we were. I led my bride in myself, and Papa and Mamma Bartley followed soberly behind, and Kate and her husband were all the crowd we had.

A curate who had a bad cold officiated, and the time honored and world renowned Dickens woman pew-opener, shabby and snuffy, was on hand to make everything romantic and proper.

So this is why we were married without bridesmaids and had two wedding days.

Siddons and Lady Macbeth.

Late one night Mr. Siddons was sitting by the fire in the modest family parlor, which in that most unassuming household, served as a dining-room or drawing room, as the case might be. He was smoking calmly his last pipe, and beginning to think about going to bed, whither, he believed, his wife had gone already. The house was sunk in dreamy silence, so was the quiet street outside; silence only broken, now and then, by the roll of distant wheels. The actor had been drawing a vague picture of a little holiday trip which he and Sarah would take next Summer, and had fallen into a half doze, in which he was driving down a country lane all scented with honeysuckle, all draped with eglantine. Suddenly he was aroused, with a start, by hurried footsteps, that were flying rather than running down the passage. Who could it be? he asked himself, all in a maze and wonder, as he jumped up and rubbed his sleep-laden eyes. He hardly had time to let the question go darting through his brain, when the door of the room was flung open quickly as by a hasty trembling hand, and a female figure rushed in.

Mr. Siddons gazed in speechless astonishment, not unmixed with a touch of fear. There before him stood his wife, her fine hair dishevelled, her dress in disorder, her face all quivering with strong emotion. In bewildered alarm he asked her what was the matter, but her only answer was to throw herself into his arms and burst into a torrent of tears. He soothed her tenderly, not knowing what to think, and gradually she grew calmer. Then her words made the mystery plain enough. Instead of going to bed as he had bade her do, she had been sitting up studying her part as Lady Macbeth; and the character had so completely absorbed her in itself, she had so entirely realized the horror of each situation in the play, had seen it all so distinctly before her eyes as if she had been there in the body, that a wild unreasoning terror had seized her, and she had rushed away to seek human companionship.

Why He Objected.

A crude old farmer, living on the line of one of the recent railroad surveys, and who is the owner of a barn of large dimensions, with huge swinging doors on both sides, observed a posse of surveyors busily driving a row of stakes through his premises that extended to the very centre of his barn. Sauntering leisurely toward the trespassers, with an air savoring somewhat of indignation, he addressed the leader of the gang as follows:

"Lyin' out another railroad?"

"Surveying for one," was the reply.

"Goin' threw my barn?"

"Don't see how we can avoid it."

"Wall, now, mister," said the worthy farmer. "I calkerlate I've got sumthin' to say 'bout that. I want you tew understan' that I've got sumthin' else tew dew besides runnin' out tew open and shet them doors every time a train wants to go threw."

Three Outlaws Shot.

Advices from Graham, Texas, report that the three McDonald boys, murderers of a man named Martin, at Belknap, made a desperate effort to escape from jail recently, which resulted in their death and that of the Deputy Sheriff, besides the serious wounding of several other people. About 10 o'clock in the morning the Macdonald boys were led from the street cage to the calaboose, and with Ed. Boone and Jack Baldwine, two other prisoners, were given their breakfast by two deputies. One deputy turned away to examine the cage while it was empty, and the other deputy, Davis Mellon, stood in the doorway of the wooden cell opening from the calaboose to the steel cage. He had a pistol in each hand keepwatch and presently he put both revolvers in one hand to get a match from his pocket, when the Macdonalds sprang upon him suddenly and disarmed him. In the struggle, Mellon was shot in the hand. His cries brought Murfee the other deputy from the cage, but, on entering the calaboose, he was shot and instantly killed by the prisoners. The prisoners then made a hole through the floor to the room below and taking Mellon with them began their escape. A blood hound watches the jail, but by a detour they avoided him and took their flight in a southernly direction. By this time the city was excited and the citizens had gathered together and followed the fleeing prisoners. The latter placed their hostage Davis behind them and threatened to shoot him dead if they were fired on. Thus the murderers proceeded some three hundred yards, when one citizen deliberately took aim and firing, mortally wounded one of the fugitives, who fell. Deputy Mellon seized the opportunity, broke loose and ran. A general fusilade was now begun by the citizens and the escaping prisoners. The latter entrenched themselves behind stumps. The battle raged for some time, and when the shooting ceased the three McDonalds were dead. Mellon was shot three times. An old man named Wood was wounded in the thigh and a waiter named Joe had the bone of his leg shattered. Baldwin and Boone took no part in the shooting and were recaptured.

How Easy it is to Die.

"If I had strength to hold a pen, I would write how easy and delightful it is to die," were the last words of the celebrated surgeon, Wm. Hunter; and Louis XIV., is recorded as saying, with his last breath, "I thought dying had been more difficult."

That the painlessness of death is owing to some benumbing influence acting on the sensory nerves may be inferred from the fact that outward external surroundings rarely trouble the dying.

On the day that Lord Collingwood breathed his last the Mediterranean was tumultuous; those elements which had been the scene of the past glories rose and fell in swelling undulations and seemed as if rocking him to sleep. Capt. Thomas ventured to ask if he was disturbed by the rocking of the ship. "No, Thomas," he answered, I am now in a state that nothing can disturb me more—I am dying, and I am sure it must be consolatory to you and all that love me to see how comfortably I am now coming to my end." In the "Quarterly Review" there is related an instance of a criminal who escaped death from hanging by the breaking of the rope. Henry IV. of France sent his physician to examine him, who reported that after a moment's suffering the man saw an appearance like fire, across which appeared a most beautiful avenue of trees. When a pardon was mentioned the prisoner coolly replied that it was not worth asking for. Those who have been near death from drowning, and afterward restored to consciousness, assert that the dying suffer but little pain.

Capt Maryatt states that his sensations at one time when nearly drowned were rather pleasant than otherwise. "The first struggle for life once over, the water assumed the appearance of waving green fields. It is not a feeling of pain, but seems like sinking down, overpowered by sleep, in the long, soft grass of the cool meadow."

Now, this is precisely the condition presented in death from disease. Insensibility comes on, the mind loses consciousness of external objects, and death rapidly and placidly ensues from asphyxia.

Some Confederate Christmases.

Mr. James D. McCabe has recorded some interesting experiences of Christmas under the Confederacy. The dinner of 1861, he says, did not differ materially from its predecessors in the "piping times of peace," and though in 1862 the feast was home-made, it was enjoyable. Turkeys were only $11 apiece, and salt had fallen to 33 cents a pound. The Yule log was obtainable at $15 a cord; wines were to be had by the very rich, and sorghum rum or apple, peach or blackberry brandy cost $30 a gallon. A few toys were left in the stores in the cities, and firecrackers, essential to the Southern festival, were $5 a pack. By 1863 the closest search of Santa Claus revealed no playthings, and firecrackers indicated great wealth or reckless extravagance. The few turkeys in the market were $40 and $50 a piece; whiskey or sorghum rum for egg nogg cost $75 or $80 a gallon; sugar was $5 and $10 a pound, and flour $125 a barrel. With gold at 2,800, a plain Christmas dinner for a large family cost $200 or $300. In 1864, when Christmas fell on Sunday, gold was at 5,000. Flour was $600 a barrel; sugar, was $2 an ounce; salt, $1 a pound; butter, $40; beef, $35 to $40. Wood was $100 a cord. Mr. McCabe describes a Christmas dinner at a country house near Richmond. The four gentlemen were in uniform, the three ladies were in homespun. They had for dinner a $300 ham, and the last turkey on the plantation, value $175, with $100 worth of cabbages, potatoes and hominy. Corn bread was served, made of meal at $80 a bushel and salt at $1 a pound. The dessert was black molasses at $60 a gallon, and after one cup of tea—real tea, worth $100 a pound, treasured for the occasion as a surprise, and not sassafras—there was coffee at discretion, made from sweet potatoes cut into little squares, toasted, and ground down.

The ice crop is a little dubious, and as to the peach crop—well, the open winter has killed nearly all the buds. There will not be half a crop.

A large nose is a sign of character. The character, however, depends on the color of the nose.—The Judge.

The Columbian.

G. E. ELWELL, J. K. BITTENBENDER, } Editors.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

Friday, Jan. 13th, 1882.

The year 1881 had its full share of crimes, and the record is not pleasant reading. There were 599 homicides in the United States and Canada; 242 suicides; 90 legal executions and 50 lynchings.

Senator Logan, it is said, has declared his intention to resist Gen. Porter's reinstatement in the army, no matter who favors it. Logan is a thorough going Republican and does not permit a little thing like justice to interfere with his prejudices.

The criminal prosecution of the Star route thieves does not progress rapidly, but, in order to keep the people in good heart, it is announced that civil suits will be begun to recover the stolen money. This ought to be vastly comforting.

It would appear that there is a feeling of sympathy for the Hon. Samuel Josephs who was shot by Mr. Robert Lister Smith on the way home from the late Democratic State Convention. All of which goes to show what a very low opinion the people have of Smith.

Gen. Fitz John Porter has addressed a letter to the President asking for an early consideration of his case. Gen. Grant has also written a letter urging that justice be done Gen. Porter. After enduring unmerited disgrace for nineteen years, he deserves a prompt and thorough vindication.

There can be no greater mistake for President Arthur to make in the opinion of the Cincinnati Enquirer than to conduct the present administration on the ambition of nomination in 1884. If the President leaves himself to the country the country will take him into consideration.

It is claimed that Senator Don Cameron has received a promise from the administration that Pennsylvania shall have two foreign missions, one first and one second class, and that he is is now making up his mind as to whom he shall name for the place. The name of General Hartranft is suggested for one place, as, if he should be appointed, Mr. Cameron would have the nomination of a new collector in Philadelphia.

Labouchere says, in London Truth: "America is sending a prime beef and mutton. American wool is ousting English from the market. American apples are more numerous in the English market than home-grown. America is now sending us 'English plum puddings,' ready for boiling. American horses have this year won the principal races in England and France. And now that America is bestirring herself about her navy, what will be left for poor old England to plume herself upon?"

The more deeply the Star route business is probed, the more offensive are the revelations. It has now been discovered that no less than 13,000 utterly worthless bonds have been imposed upon the post office department. This certainly could not have been done had business been transacted in the department with honesty and fidelity. Five of the contractors and sureties on these fraudulent bonds have been arrested, and it will be interesting to see how vigorously the prosecutions against them will be urged.

Hon. Godlove S. Orth considers himself a man of no little importance and is very indignant because Speaker Keifer did not assign him to bigger committees. He made a savage speech against the Speaker a few days since, on the floor of the House and asked to be excused from serving on one of the committees in which he had been placed. As a matter of fact, the general opinion is that Keifer's treatment of Orth is about the only commendable thing he has done. Orth isn't a very great man, except in his own eyes, and the country will get along rather better if he is kept in the back ground.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Philadelphia & Reading R. R. Co. for the election of officers began on Monday last. The struggle between Franklin B. Gowen and Frank S. Bond for the presidency of the road was vigorous. Balloting began on Monday afternoon and at the time we go to press had not ended. Mr. Gowen is far ahead, but the friends of Mr. Bond say that large blocks of stock held by the McCalmonts and others are yet to be cast for him. So far as can be seen, Mr. Gowen's chances are the better. He claims that a large number of shares held by W. H. Vanderbilt are to be counted for him. The betting in Philadelphia is two to one in favor of Gowen.

Speaker Keifer's packed committees please neither Democrats nor Republicans, and the grumbling is ominous. Mr. Keifer when elected gave notice that he was a partisan, but to what extent was not known at the time. He has since made the matter perfectly clear. The composition of the committee on elections proves beyond all controversy that justice and decency are not to be regarded when in conflict with party claims. The committee was formed for the express purposes of admitting the contestants from the South and shutting out the legally elected members. So extremely distasteful are Mr. Keifer's acts, that a resolution has been introduced in the House to take the appointing of committees out of the Speaker's hands and have them chosen by ballot.

A perfect flood of bills poured into Congress on Monday last, there being no less than 675 in the House alone. Two bills to amend the Constitution were introduced in the House: one to perpetuate the Electoral College during the entire Presidential term and giving the College power to elect a new President in case of death; the other to allow an additional United States Senator for each million of inhibatants in any State in excess of two millions. Several bills against polygamy were presented. In the Senate, Mr. Logan introduced a bill appropriating the entire income from the tax on the manufacture and sale of distilled spirits to the education of children. In the Senate on Tuesday the Morrill tariff commission bill was discussed. In the House the Utah contested election was referred to the committee on elections. On Wednesday the Senate discussed the Sherman three per cent. refunding bill. In the House, Mr. Orth's resolution relative to a change in the manner of appointing committees was referred to the committee on rules.

There seems to be a strong probability of the appointment of Effigy Sargent as Secretary of the Interior. This would be even worse than putting Howe at the head of the post office department and almost as bad as making Stanley Mat thews a justice of the Supreme Court. Even the Philadelphia Press objects, and says "Ex-Senator Sargent would be objectionable as Secretary of the Interior, not as a politician but as a man. He has made a bad record in all his old places; there is no reason to suppose he would make a good record in a new one."

The Democrats in the New York State Senate are doing bad work and the result will be felt at the next election. As usual, Tammany Hall is in the row, but, contrary to precedent, it appears to be in the right in one respect. The regular Democrats insist upon John C. Jacobs as president pro tem. and the Tammany men refuse to vote for him. Mr. Jacobs is an objectionable candidate, in that he is an unscrupulous politician of a low type. It is much to be regretted that the discordant elements in the Democratic party of New York cannot be reconciled without loss of time. If the present bitter warfare continues much longer, it will not be a surprise if the State falls into Republican hands.

DISASTER AT SEA.

Another frightful calamity at sea is reported. The steamship Lion of St. Johns, Newfoundland, is believed to have been lost with all on board, forty three in number. The body of a lady, one of the passengers, has been found. Two of the steamer's boats, ten kegs of oil, and a quantity of lumber corresponding with the vessel's cargo, have been found. There were eighteen passengers and thirty-five officers and crew on board. The names of the passengers are not known as the steamer was not a regular passenger boat and no formal list was kept. How the disaster occurred is a mystery, as the weather was fine and clear and the sea calm. It may have resulted from a boiler explosion or the steamer may have been cut down and sunk by another and larger vessel. Another theory is that the light of the lighthouse was obscured and the steamer rushed at full speed into the precipitous rocky shore. The Lion was of about 500 tons capacity, was built of oak and valued at $50,000.

GUITEAU'S BODY SOLD.

The Guiteau trial is full of surprises and another queer thing has just come to light. A few days ago a man called upon Mr. Scoville, Guiteau's lawyer, and offered $1000 for the body of the assassin and said that he would take the risk of Guiteau not being hanged. Mr. Scoville was astonished but the man was evidently in earnest and Mr. Scoville said he would give him an answer the following day. The proposition was submitted to Guiteau and seemed to impress him favorably. After reflecting a moment, he said: "I think I ought to bring more than that. Perhaps some other fellow will offer $2,000. Then I can pay my debts, and if I get a new trial that miserable Corkhill can't bring on a lot of fellows just to swear how much I owe them."

The offer was finally accepted and papers signed. The name of the man is not known, nor can it be surmised what he proposes to do with the body. The money will be used to pay off the numerous debts incurred by Guiteau.

Terrible Sufferings of a Shipwrecked Crew.

The coasting schooner Almon Bird, of Rockland, Mo., Capt. C. A. Packard, was bound from Windsor, N. S., for Alexandria, Va., with a cargo of plaster. On Sunday night, January 1st, when off Boone Island, the gale tore off her top mast, and the rigging became so thickly covered with ice that it was almost useless. On Monday morning the high seas stove in her bulwarks, ripped up the batches, and flooded the vessel. Soon it was found that she was sinking, and the crew took to the large boat. There was little time to get food or extra clothing, and by a strange misfortune they could not get their oars. The schooner sank, and the boat was left oarless with its living freight in a violent gale and heavy sea. Thus they drifted about drenched with the icy spray of the waves, crowded together for protection from the bitter cold, and almost hopeless of rescue. On Tuesday their stock of food was nearly gone, and they were becoming frozen. They saw a sail and made an effort to attract attention, but in vain, and they crouched down for another night. On Wednesday they suffered terribly from hunger and cold. Two of the men became crazed and threw themselves about the boat in their delirium. Toward night one of the men went to sleep in the bottom of the boat and died before morning. The two delirious men also died. There were now three dead and five living men in the boat. The living, suffering the pangs of hunger, and hopeless of relief, held a consultation, the result of which was that they opened the veins of one of their dead comrades, and wet their lips and throat with the still warm blood. On Thursday morning they were rescued by Capt. Saunders, who was with his schooner fishing. The living men were frozen purple and hardly able to speak, and their lips and faces were smeared with blood. Capt. Packard's feet were badly frozen, although he may possibly recover the use of them. The other men also had badly frozen feet and hands.

GUITEAU'S TRIAL.

The arguments for and against the prayers of the prosecution began on Saturday, Mr. Davidge speaking for the government and Messrs. Reed and Scoville for the defense. The latter gentleman continued his argument on Monday and was followed by Mr. Davidge. On Tuesday Judge Porter made an eloquent and effective speech which made the assassin writhe and to a great extent silenced his abusive tongue. When interrupted by Guiteau on one occasion Judge Porter said, "The prisoner is mistaken, your honor, if he believes by his unseemly brawling he can prevent my voice from being heard by the jury. The puppet cannot be moved in such good time as when he sat with his counsel, and by his outbursts now he is fast tightening the hangman's noose about his neck."

Porter's review of the inspiration theory was scorching in its severity. "Was this worthless vagabond," he exclaimed, "the man to be selected and inspired by God? a cheat, a swindler, a creature of the vilest habits. He then is the junior member of the firm of Jesus Christ & Co.—this murderer tracking his victim at night, church, at the railroad station, everywhere, till the deed is done. But granted his hideous pretension and allow him the inspiration of Paul, which he impiously quotes, that does not protect him, as it did not protect Paul from stripes and death." Guiteau here burst out with a furious interruption, saying he was ready to take the consequence of his act.

Judge Porter's speech closed effectively with a letter from President Garfield complimenting Judge Payne on his charge in the Gallatin murder case, in which the Judge had taken strong grounds against the plea of emotional and transitory mania. "How little thought the victim," exclaimed Judge Porter, "that this letter was to be thus introduced at the trial of his murderer."

Judge Cox then began the reading of his decision which consumed an hour and forty minutes. The first point was relative to jurisdiction. This he decided was complete and the court had full cognizance of the offence. Judge Cox next took up the question of the legal test of insanity, and decided that the knowledge and appreciation of the difference between right and wrong must be taken as the correct test.

Upon every material point the Judge's rulings were directly against the prisoner. When the question of reasonable doubt was reached the Judge said, "I shall not charge the jury to acquit if they find a reasonable doubt as to any one element; but I shall take into consideration and charge them relative to all the elements, and that if from all the circumstances and all the evidence they have a reasonable doubt of the commission by the defendant of the crime as charged, then they shall acquit."

Court then adjourned until Thursday morning when Mr. Davidge will make the opening argument to the jury. It begins to look as if the trial was nearing its end and great will be the relief of the people when that event occurs.

Judge Ross, of Montgomery county, has laid down that a teacher who whips a pupil in violation of the rules adopted by the school authorities renders himself liable to a prosecution for assault and battery.

A Johnstown boy dug out the burrow of a ground squirrel to see how much food it had stored away. He found two hundred walnuts, sixty-three potatoes, and forty chestnuts, besides about half a pint of cherry seeds.

About three inches of snow fell on Tuesday night, and it began to look as if there would be sleighing. Towards morning, however, rain set in and put an end to that probability. A few sleighs were put into service but the result was not satisfactory.

With its last issue, the Bloomsburg COLUMBIAN enters upon its sixteenth year of existence. It is one of the best local papers in the State and never was in a more flourishing condition than at this present time.—Williamsport Sun & Banner.

This bids fair to be a most variable winter, warm and cold days alternating in quick succession. Ice dealers will be wise if they take advantage of every cold snap and cut ice so soon as it is of sufficient thickness. Those who wait to secure twelve inch cubes may greet the Spring with empty ice houses. It looks that way now, at least.

On the 29th of November last, the son of John Emerick of Berwick, disappeared from home and his father is very anxious to know where he is. The lad is eleven years old, about three feet six inches in height, and has light hair and blue eyes. Any one having information of the child would confer a favor by addressing Mr. Emerick at Berwick.

An exchange asks, "Isn't it about time for the newspapers to call a halt upon the impudence of the patent medicine advertiser?" We unhesitatingly reply that it is, and add that the COLUMBIAN has already done that thing. There is no limit to the greed of patent medicine men and the rates they expect to pay are too utterly small.

On Thursday of last week, while Martin Cain, who was in the employ of the Reading Coal and Iron Company, was engaged in wheeling coal-dirt from a bank in Centralia, the upper portion of the bank gave way and many tons of dirt fell on him. He was smothered to death in a short time. Cain was an old man and was making his last trip for the day.

The Williamsport Gazette & Bulletin says that Mr. D. A. Beckley, one of the editors of the Bloomsburg Republican, has been made an assistant postal railway clerk on the route from New York to Pittsburg. This is not exactly true. Mr. Beckley is in the post-office business, but still holds the position of postmaster in this town. His son was appointed railway clerk.

The kindly feeling existing between employers and employees at Harman & Hassert's foundry was manifested during the holidays. The hands presented the proprietors on Christmas with a pair of gold fountain pens, an inkstand, and a glass paper weight with a thermometer, and on New Year's (Monday) the boys partook of an oyster supper at the invitation of Messrs. Harman & Hassert. Such relations are exceedingly pleasant, and are as commendable as they are rare.

Every woman who has been obliged to spend half a day several times during the winter cleaning the mica in her coal stove, usually by taking them out and washing them in soapsuds, will rejoice to know that there is no need to take them out or let the fire burn very low in order to do it successfully. Take a little vinegar and water and wash the mica carefully with a soft cloth, the acid removes all stains, and if a little pains is taken to thoroughly clean the corners and wipe them dry, the mica will look as good as new. If the stove is very hot, tie the cloth to a stick, and so escape the danger of burning your hands.

Having been troubled with a very bad cough for about two years and having tried almost every cough mixture that was ever made, I have found none that has given me such great relief as Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and I earnestly recommend it to all afflicted.
BENJ. F. DUDGAN, 14 Park Pl. N. Y.

There has been great mortality among children of late, the most fatal disease being membranous croup. Two children of John McCormick, an infant child of William Coffman, and a child of Harry Fornwald, died last week. There are many sorrowing households in town from which the darlings have been lost.

Executors' and administrators' account books, containing full instructions how to settle an estate, receipts, &c., for sale at this office. These are the most convenient books of the kind ever printed, and they are in use all over the State. t-f

Benjamin Alabach, living on the hills above Orangeville, and who has been carrying the mail from Orangeville to Waller during the past year, was taken sick the early part of this week, and at last report the disease was pronounced small pox. It is to be hoped that it may not spread, as he lives away from town and where people need not go.

At the last meeting of the Hazleton Borough School Board, Miss M. A. Lee, Miss H. M. Vanderslice, and Miss L. A. Weir, tendered their resignations as teachers, and the board elected Miss M. E. Schlicker of Mountain Grove, Miss Amelia Armstrong of Bloomsburg, and Miss Eliza Mears of Ashland, Schuylkill county, to fill the vacancies.

The Muncy Luminary says: "Rev. W. R. McCutcheon, who has had charge of the old Emanuel Lutheran church, in Muncy Creek township, and also the Clarkstown and Huntersville churches, for some time, has resigned and accepted a call to Mifflinville, Columbia county. Mr. McCutcheon has made hosts of friends in this valley during his residence here, who wish him success in his new field."

The receiver for the Lycoming Mutual Fire Insurance Company, of Muncy, has laid an assessment of twenty per cent. upon the notes given by policy holders of said company. This assessment, it is stated, will be sufficient to pay off the indebtedness of the company and close up the concern. We should imagine that the stockholders of this unfortunate company will be highly delighted when its affairs are wound up. It has been a source of expense during its entire existence.

At this season foul chimneys often take fire and burn out. When such an event causes danger, an effectual remedy is within reach of every prudent house-wife. Though it is familiar to many it needs repeating. Sprinkle common salt on the fire, in the stove, in such a manner as to burn the salt. If done wisely, a large amount of chlorine gas will be generated, filling the pipe and chimney, expelling the air and extinguishing the fire. A diligent use of this will avoid all alarm and remove all danger of a fire from this cause.

The editors of the Republican have waxed exceeding wroth at the loss of the forty dollars promised them for the "Ozone" advertisement, and in order to get even with somebody, they devoted 175 lines of their issue this week to us. They should not allow their feathers to get ruffled in that way, as we are not responsible for their loss. If they manage judiciously, they can easily make it up on those books which they received in payment of a patent medicine advertisement, another of our rejected contracts.

Accidents.

William Knorr, had one of the fingers of his right hand cut off by a circular saw at Lockard's car shops on Tuesday. Another finger was partially severed.

Charles Fornwald was severely burned on Friday last, by molten iron flying from the ladle when casting. The fiery mass struck him on the head and ran down his back inflicting painful wounds. He will be incapacitated for work for some time to come.

On Thirty Days Trial.

Oct. 28, '81-1y

On Wednesday, says the Lock Haven Journal, a distressing and fatal accident occurred on Youngman's creek. R. D. Richardson, of Washingtonville, Montour county, was employed on James Daugherty's lumber job on the stream mentioned above. The unfortunate man was sawing logs on the side of the mountain while a fellow workman engaged himself at chopping down a tree further up the hill. The tree, after falling, started to slide, limbs and all, and Mr. Richardson, instead of running to one side, ran down the mountain, in the course of the tree. He was overtaken and instantly killed. His body was badly torn by the limbs of the tree.

A correspondent of the New York Sun furnishes that paper the following cure for small pox. He says it has been tried and proved effective.

Sulphate of zinc, one grain.
Fox Glove (digitalis), one grain.
Half a teaspoonful of water.

When thoroughly mixed, add four ounces of water; take a spoonful every hour—dose for an adult.

Either small-pox or scarlet fever will disappear in twelve hours.

For a child, smaller doses, according to age.

The prescription can be compounded by any druggist.

Never go to bed with cold or damp feet. In going into a colder air, keep the mouth resolutely closed, that by compelling the air to pass circuitously through the nose and head, it may become warmed before it reaches the lungs, and thus prevent those shocks and sudden chills which frequently end in pleurisy, pneumonia, and other serious forms of disease. Never sleep in the draft of an open window. Let more covering be on the lower limbs than the body. Have an extra covering within easy reach, in case of a sudden and great change of weather during the night. Never stand still a moment out of doors, especially at street corners after having walked even a short distance.

Township and borough elections will be held next month. Now is the time to look about, and select proper candidates for the several offices to be filled. It too often happens that no attention is paid to this election until a day or two beforehand, and then the first names that suggest themselves are placed on the ticket, frequently resulting in the election of careless school directors, incompetent justices, unfit supervisors, or inefficient constables. If there are any townships in this county that have such officers now, the people should see to it, that their successors shall be men of a different stripe. As a general rule our township officers compare very favorably with those of other counties.

Mrs. David Rahm died at her home in this place on Monday morning last at 4 o'clock. She had long been a sufferer, and her death was not unexpected. Mrs. Rahm was a valued member of our community, and a lady whose christian graces and dignity of character made her much esteemed and respected. She was 65 years old, and leaves a husband and four children—Messrs John Rahm, of this place and Ross Rahm of Lacyville, and Misses Sarah and Sue, who are living at home. The funeral was at the house Wednesday afternoon at one o'clock, and was largely attended, not only by our townspeople, but by friends and relatives from other places. The service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Enos. The pall bearers were as follows: Geo. Stevens, I. O. Blight, M. C. Mercur, Jos. Powell, J. F. Means, and C. S. Russell.—Towanda Journal.

Very few persons are aware of the extent to which some of the seemingly most trifling articles of trade are dealt in. Celery is a vegetable which apparently receives but little attention from the public, and still the trade in this article amounts annually to many thousands of dollars. While many use it for its medicinal qualities, its well known effect on the nervous system causing it to be highly prized, others and by far the majority of the consumers consider it a luxury, fit only for the wealthy. Few are aware that fully one-third of the celery of commerce is thrown away as useless. All the coarser parts—the outside stalks and the greener portion of the stalk—all in fact that is unfit for the celery glass—can be utilized by cutting into short pieces, cooking and serving in precisely the same manner as asparagus. All housekeepers who try it never after waste any of their celery.

The M. E. Church at Jonestown is about completed and the dedication will take place on Sunday the twenty second of this month. The dedication sermon will be delivered by Doctor Gray of Williamsport, who is an able speaker. Come one, come all and hear him and be sure and bring your pocket books and have your names inscribed on the roll of honor. Jonestown has long needed a house for worship and this building is an ornament to the place. It is to be hoped the surrounding churches will receive the same repairs as they begin to look very shabby.

Jonestown is getting to be quite a model place with a church, grist mill, school house, two black smith shops, wagon maker shop, shoe shop and store. W. N. Hasler proprietor and Mr. John Huff is expected to start one the first of April next.

The Reading Times, in referring to the recent accident on the Pennsylvania railroad says, that one result of endeavoring to suppress the news of such unfortunate occurrences on the railroad, is that, oftentimes greatly exaggerated versions of the affairs are reported in the newspapers, the information being obtained from second-hand and from rumors. It may be readily inferred that these necessarily meagre and unsatisfactory accounts of accidents on the railroad frequently cause uncalled-for anxiety on the part of the relatives and friends of those supposed to have been injured, and generally indirectly reflect more severely upon the mismanagement of the railroad company than a full and faithful account of the real accident would. It seems, however, that those in authority would rather have the newspapers publish that half a dozen men were killed than give them an iota of information to let them know that, instead of such a rumored calamity, it was only a brakeman who had his little finger crushed.

Resolutions.

At a meeting of a Committee appointed by the Lutheran Sunday School the following resolutions were adopted;

WHEREAS.—It has pleased our Heanenly Father in His all wise providence to enter our Sabbath School and Choir and remove from thence by death one of our most esteemed members, Laura Jones, therefore

Resolved, That we the School deeply deplore our loss, feeling that by this sad visitation there has been taken from us one of our brightest, most devoted and faithful scholars.

Resolved, That we the Choir have lost one of our most efficient members, and that her voice will be greatly missed in the many Services of song which she rendered so acceptably.

Resolved, That by her true Chrstian spirit she not only gained the respect and love of all who knew her, but also set an example by which we may all profit.

Resolved, That we, the Sabbath School and Choir, tender to her family and friends our warmest sympathy in this their sad bereavement, committing them to the care of Him who ever careth for them.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, and also be published in the Bloomsburg papers.

Bloomsburg, Jan. 10, 1882.

From Centralia.

Since the holidays our town has been unusually dull, although the collieries, with the exception of the Continental and North Ashland, are working.

The funeral of Martin Cain Sr. who was killed last week, was largely attended last Sunday.

Thomas Curry of Ashland and Miss Lally of the same place, were married last Monday morning by the Rev. Father Patterson and after the ceremony left for New York with the best wishes and congratulations of their many friends.

The approaching spring election does not appear to be of much importance in Centralia Borough, at least we have not heard of the candidates for the several offices. The only question that is discussed is whether arrangements will be made to give a constant supply of water this year. But in Conyghan township the campaign has begun, and candidates for the offices, particularly that of Poor Director and Supervisor, are very busy in endeavoring to prove that they should be elected. The people hear all, and have to endure it, knowing that when these offices are filled there will be peace, for there is no danger of a resignation taking place.

Our sporting fraternity are anxious to learn whether or not Eisenfoilt is going to challenge D. F. Curry for another match. We understand that Daniel is ready to accept.

Dr. Gwinner has rented an office in the Morrison building on Locust Avenue.

Leases and notices to quit for sale at this office.

The new Evangelical Church in Nescopeck was dedicated last Sunday. Rev. B. Hengst, of Lewisburg, and Rev. S. W. Seibert of Newport officiated. Rev. J. M. Ettinger is pastor.

PROOF POSITIVE.

We have the most positive and convincing proof that Thomas' Eclectric Oil is a most effectual specific for bodily pain. In cases of rheumatism and neuralgia it gives instant relief.

Personal.

Mr. Cyrus B. McHenry passed through town last Tuesday, on his way to Danville.

Mr. John S. Phillips has resigned his position in the COLUMBIAN office and joined the engineer corps of the North and West Branch Railway Company.

Mr. Harry Birkenbine of Philadelphia, was in town this week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Monroe of Rupert, were in Towanda last week, attending the funeral of Mrs. Rahm.

Rev. D. J. Waller, Sr., Rev. D. J. Waller Jr. and wife, and Miss Laura Waller, visited relatives in Honesdale last week.

Mrs. Holbrook and daughter, Miss Jennie, former residents of this town, are visiting at Mrs. Lewis'.

Daniel McHenry of Stillwater, was registered at the Exchange Hotel several days this week.

Mrs. Enos Adams was the guest of the Misses Fredericks, last week.

Agib Ricketts Esq. of Wilkes Barre was in town on Thursday.

Miss Hastings, a teacher in the Normal School has returned from a visit to friends in Hartford, Conn.

Miss Dora A. Wolf returned on Saturday from a long visit to friends in Michigan. She met with a hearty welcome.

Mr. A. R. Bacon of Wilkes-Barre, registered at the Exchange Hotel on Thursday. He sold a fine Weber piano in Catawissa.

BADLY BITTEN.

Peter Kiefer, cor. Clinton and Bennett Streets, Buffalo, was badly bitten by a horse, and applied Thomas' Eclectric Oil, was immediately relieved of the pain, and in four days the wound was healed.

Busy Burglars.

From all parts of the State come reports of the depredations committed by burglars. It is not strange in view of the number of thieves at work, that Bloomsburg and vicinity should be visited. On Thursday night of last week, the L. & B. R. R. station in this town was entered by burglars who forced open the front door. They searched the ticket office but found no money as none is kept there over night. The same night the Reading R. R. ticket office at Rupert was broken open, but all the thieves obtained was about three dollars in cash.

Last Saturday night at about twelve o'clock, a young man named Robbins, a clerk in the store of T. W. Conner, saw a man prowling about near the rear entrance to Holmes and Schuyler's hardware store. Word was conveyed to Mr. Schuyler at the Exchange Hotel, and he with several others proceeded at once to the store. No one was found at or near the building, nor could it be seen that any attempt had been made to gain an entrance. In view of the other burglaries, however, it is probable that the man seen by Mr. Robbins intended mischief and had been frightened away.

A second attempt to rob Mrs. Aul's store at Espy, was made on Sunday night. On this occasion the clerk was in the store and gave the depredators, two in number, a warm reception. He fired two shots from his revolver, neither of which, unfortunately, took effect.

We advise all householders to fasten their doors and windows securely at night, and keep a sharp watch for suspicious characters. It is to be hoped that some of these midnight marauders may be captured ere long, and receive punishment severe enough to frighten others away.

PERILS OF THE DEEP.

The world-renowned swimmer, Capt. Paul Boyton, in an interview with a newspaper correspondent at the seashore, related the following incidents in his experience:

Reporter.—Captain Boyton, you must have seen a large part of the world?"

Capt. Boyton.—"Yes sir, by the aid of my rubber life saving dress, I have traveled over 10,000 miles on the rivers of America and Europe; have been presented to the crowned heads of England, France, Germany, Austria, Belgium, Italy, Holland, Spain and Portugal, and have in my possession forty-two medals and decorations; I have three times received the order of knighthood, and been elected honorary member of committees, clubs, orders and societies."

Reporter.—"Were your various trips accompanied by much danger?"

Capt. Boyton.—"That depends upon what you may call dangerous. During my trip down the river Tagus in Spain, I had to "shoot" one hundred and two waterfalls, the highest being about eighty-five feet, and innumerable rapids. Crossing the Straits of Messina, I had three ribs broken in a fight with sharks; and coming down the Somane, a river in France, I received a charge of shot from an excited and startled huntsman. Although all this was not very pleasant, and might be termed dangerous, I fear nothing more on my trip than intense cold; for, as long as my limbs are free and easy, and not cramped or benumbed, I am all right. Of late I carry a stock of St. Jacobs Oil in my little boat,—(the Captain calls it "Baby Mine," and has stored therein signal rockets, thermometer, compass, provisions, etc.) and I have had but little trouble. Before starting out I rub myself thoroughly with the article, and its action on the muscles is wonderful. From constant exposure I am somewhat subject to rheumatic pains, and nothing would ever benefit me, until I got hold of the Great German Remedy. Why, on my travels I have met people who have been suffering with rheumatism for years; by my advice they tried the oil, and it cured them. I would sooner do without food for days than be without this remedy for one hour. In fact I would not attempt a trip without it."

The Captain became very enthusiastic on the subject of St. Jacobs Oil, and we left him citing instances of the curative qualities of the Great German Remedy to a party around him.

Agricultural Experiments.

The Superintendent of the Guelph model farm, Province of Ontario, offers the following as the result of his experiments:

1. A steady, frosty winter is better than an open one in feeding cattle.
2. An average two or three-year-old steer will eat its own weight of different materials, in two weeks.
3. Two or three-year old cattle will add one-third of a pound more per head per day to their weight upon prepared hay and roots than upon the same materials unprepared.
4. It is thirty per cent more profitable to pre-manure and dispose of fattening cattle at two years old than to keep them up to three years.
5. There is no loss in feeding cattle well upon a variety of materials for the sake of the manure alone.
6 Farm yard manure from well fed cattle, three years old, is worth an average of $3.30 per ton.
7. A three-year old cattle beast, well fed, will give at least one ton of manure every month of Winter.
8. No cattle beast whatever will pay for the direct increase to its weight from the consumption of any kind or quantity of food.
9. On an average it costs twelve cents for every additional pound of flesh added to the weight of a two or three-year old fattening steer.
10. In this country the market value of store cattle can be increased thirty six per cent. during six months of finishing by good feeding.
11. In order to secure a safe profit, no store cattle beast well done to, can be sold at less than 4½ cents per pound (live weight.)
12. In the fattening of wethers, to finish as shearlings, the Cotswold and Leicester grades can be made up 200 pounds, the Oxford Down 180 pounds, and the Southdown (grades) 160 pounds each (live weight).

Seeding Land to Grass.

Probably nine-tenths of the farmers of the United States sow all their grass seed in the Spring, and usually can give no better reason than that they have always done so, and their fathers before them. Many of them do not know that any other season will answer for seeding. On the majority of farms in this latitude, August and September are better than spring, as a crop of hay may be obtained the following season, whether the grass seed be sown alone or with wheat or rye. I have sown grass seed with wheat in early September, on land not subject to heaving and have taken a good crop of each the following season. Clover seed will necessarily have to be sown in the spring, as the young plants are liable to winter-kill. When the frost leaves the ground in winter or spring, after seeding with or without grain, it pays to roll the field with a heavy roller, first sowing the clover seed. If the plants stand firm and well the smoothing harrow may be substituted for the roller. The roller, or harrow should be used as early in spring as the surface becomes dry enough to crumble. In many cases it is good policy to sow grass seed alone. For instance, one has a "run out" meadow, and wishing to keep it in grass, can plow down the sod as early in spring as possible to work it well, apply a good surface dressing of manure, harrowing it in well, making a fine seed bed, and on this sow the varieties of grass and clover seed desired. Usually a fair crop of hay may be made from the land the same season, and a better one the season following. Lands may thus be seeded in early fall to good advantage. For instance, take sward land that hardly pays the expense of mowing it, and plow it in August, and treat it as above, sowing it immediately to grasses, including clover, which will become well rooted before winter sets in, and a good crop of hay may be reasonably expected the next season. Any other land than sward may be thus seeded, if done in August, (provided it be sufficiently fertile), and produce a good crop of hay the following season.

A First-rate Jersey Cow.

The famous Jersey Queen comes from the herd imported by E. T. Fairbanks & Co., was purchased when only a few days old, together with her mother, by D. Harvey of Peacham, Vt. She was sold when nine months old to a farmer of that town for $32. In six months from that time she was purchased by Asa Hoyt, a cooper, of the same place. Mr. Hoyt owned her for several years. The last year that she was in his possession he kept an attentive account of all the butter and milk which the Queen produced. At the end of the year he found that she had made 146 pounds of butter.

In 1879 the cow was resold to Josiah Kinerson, of Barnet, Vt., for $1,000. Mr. Kinerson christened her the Jersey Queen, and in 1881 he had an accurate account kept of her milk and butter. She has already produced between 500 and 600 pounds of butter, and at the end of the year her record will pass 800 pounds.

Mr. Kinerson has just sold the Queen to A. B. Darling, proprietor of the Fifth Avenue Hotel of New York, for $2,000 cash. Mr. Darling now owns the best two cows in the world—Eurotas, whose record is 750 pounds of butter in one year, and the Jersey Queen, whose record will pass 800 pounds.—Springfield Republican.

Farm Work for Spare Time.

Just before winter sets in or in the early part of it there are many days when but little work seems called for in the fields. The "Cultivator" enumerates the following things as being profitable to look after at such times: "A coat of paint applied to wood work will preserve it for a great many years, and paint applied to iron work will greatly preserve it, but in this case the bearings should not be painted. A coating of lard oil, would, however, be found of good service; the bearings would be preserved from rust and when the machine was brought into use in spring or summmer it would run much easier than if allowed to rust all winter. In case paint is thought to be too expensive, petroleum is as good a preservative, though appearance is sacrificed in its use. On a clear day in winter, the shingles of buildings might have a coat of whitewash, which would preserve them many years, and though it would not render them fire proof, yet it makes them less liable to take fire.

With corn the best way to rid it of smut is to pass through it and gather and burn all the affected ears and stalks. In this way the many millions of spores are kept from being spread and continuing the pest. With the smaller grains, as wheat and oats, this method, though it is the most effective, would probably be impracticable. Though the remedy is not easy of application, it is a step forward in the work, to know the exact nature of the trouble, and about this there is no doubt. Smut is a small parasite plant preying upon those of a higher order.

The Strongest Man.

THE STORY OF A RUSSIAN COUNT WITH WONDERFUL STRENGTH.

Gregory Orloff was a Russian count who lived about a hundred years ago, and was not only a count, but an admiral as well, though there were people who said that if he had to manage the fleet by himself, instead of having three or four excellent naval commanders to help him, he would have made a poor job of it. But whatever doubts there might have been about his statesmanship, there could be none about his strength, for he was one of the largest and most powerful men of Russia. Like many other giants, he was, perhaps just a little too fond of showing off his great strength. Nothing pleased him more than to bend a horse shoe betweeen his fingers, or pull out of the ground a stake which no one else could move; and if one of his sailors turned mutinous, and began to make a noise, Orloff would just take him by the throat, and shake him as a cat shakes a mouse, after which the brawler was usually quiet enough.

Now, it happened that one night this strong handed admiral was at an evening party at the palace, and as he was handing a bouquet of flowers to one of the ladies, the silver paper which was around it slipped off. Orloff said nothing, but stepped to the supper table, and taking up a silver dish, rolled up like a piece of paper, put the bouquet into it and handed it to the lady; and this is the dish you see in the museum.

Not long after this, Orloff arrived in St. Petersburg from a journey, and was met at his own door by a messenger from the palace, who told him that the Empress particularly wished to see him, and he must go to her at once. Some men would have waited to put on their finest clothes, and to make themselves look gay and dandified; but the admiral was used to obeying orders at once, and off he started for the palace, just as he was.

Now, while the admiral had been journeying, there had come to the palace a new hall porter who had never seen him before. This porter was a strong fellow, although not nearly as big as Orloff, and not a nice tempered man by any means; so when he saw the admiral's big coarse, ugly-looking figure coming up to the door of the stately palace in a dusty traveling dress, he shouted fiercely:

"Be off, you vagabond! You've no business here! Who are you, I should like to know?"

Orloff never answered, but stooped and picked up a long iron bar that fastened the door at night. One jerk of his great strong hands twisted it around the porter's neck like a ribbon, so that the poor fellow had to hold up the ends.

"Now, my boy," said he, with a broad grin, "go and show yourself to the Empress with that iron collar on, and she will know who I am!"

Then the porter knew at once that this must be the terrible Count Orloff, of whose strength he had heard so much, and he fell on his knees to ask pardon. But Orloff only laughed, and told him not to be quite so ready to judge a man by his outside another time; and, indeed, from that day forth the porter was always civil to everybody.—St. Nicholas for January.

A Treasure Trove.

A very singular discovery is reported to have been made by a party of six Spaniards while on a shooting expedition in the island of Fermentara, which is part of the Balearic group. They came upon a large cavern, entrance to which seemed almost impossible, owing to the thick growth of brambles. Their curiosity, however, was excited by the evidence that the cavern had been made by human hands, and they cleared away the obstacles in their path, arriving after several hours' hard work in a spacious chamber of Arab architecture in an excellent state of preservation. In the centre of this chamber stood two splendid tombs of a very peculiar shape, and of great external beauty. They lifted without much difficulty the lids of these two tombs, and were greatly astonished to find that they contained the mummies of a young woman and an elderly man of colossal stature. Upon the head of the woman was a diadem which if the stones are real, is of priceless value. There was a large pearl necklace round her throat, carbuncles in her ears, and her fingers were covered with rings. The male figure had an Imperial crown upon his head, and a scepter in his right right hand. The people of the Island were aware of the existence of this cavern, but they believed that it was only a refuge for the serpents which are so numerous there. Four of the Spaniards remain in the cavern to guard this treasure trove, while the two others have gone to Madrid to inform the authorities of their discovery.

The Doings of a Burglarious Elephant

The proprietor of a circus lately visiting Boulogne-sur-Seine, in France, owns an elephant of peculiar intelligence, which draws corks, fires pistols, rings bells, opens doors, and so on, with unusual skill. At Boulogne-sur-Seine, he lived in a stable which communicated with the establishment of a confectioner. One night the elephant opened his own door, and found himself facing the door of the shop. Profiting by his education he picked the lock of the shop door, opened it, and sacked the premises. First he ate up all the cakes and sweets. Then he turned to the bottles, neatly drew the corks, and finished them one after another, replacing the empty flask exactly where he found it. Stimulated with wine, refreshed with pastry, the creature's excellent taste suggested coffee, and he sought, discovered and consumed all the café poir prepared for next day's use. After this, he began business, opening every drawer, and inspecting if not swallowing the contents. After devouring all the sugar, lump and candied and moist, he came to the cash drawer, and in the excitement of burglarious greed at this moment he smashed a marble table. The noise brought down the householder, armed with a poker. The intruder after some difficulty was ejected and put back to the stable.

It is an easy matter to train a heifer to stand quietly to be milked, but it is easier to train them to jump, kick and run. The way to teach them to stand still is to require them always to do so. If there is naught to hinder a wild heifer from running, and if her fears prompt her to run, she can and will run. If she cannot run, in a short time she loses her fear and stands from habit; and habit is one of the most powerful influences in this world for either brute or man. If you want to transform a wild heifer into a well-behaved and well-trained cow, you must be patient and exhibit no temper. Never strike her.

"The mainspring of Italian music in the eighteenth century is in the organ-grinder's arm.—"Richmond Baton."

THE SUN,

NEW YORK, 1882.

The Sun for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, weak and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and womankind of every sort, but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

The Sun of 1881 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of The Sun. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the seven years past has been modelled after The Sun, every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of The Sun's example.

The Sun of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truth-telling, and fat-resisting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it into readable shape, and measuring its importance not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with The Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting, we get the particulars, whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bothans.

In politics we have decided opinions, and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of The Sun's political course.

The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An agricultural department of unrivalled merit, full of market reports, and a literary department of literary, scientific, and domestic intelligence completo in The Weekly Sun, can make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like The Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good-sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for The Sun.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily Sun, a four page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6 50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight-page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7 70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of The Sun is also furnished separately at $1 20 a year postage paid.

The price of the Weekly Sun, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.
